PATHWAY GUIDE · 2026–27

Medico-Legal Education

Where medicine is asked to answer to the court.

Structured, practice-based education for psychiatrists, psychologists and legal professionals — from a single masterclass to full certification, in any order, starting wherever you are.

A clinical opinion and a legal finding are not the same document.

Most psychiatric reports entering court were never written for court.

They are written the way clinicians are trained to write: to describe a patient and plan their care. A court asks something different — a specific legal question, answered with reasoning it can follow, at a level of confidence the evidence supports. When that gap is not closed, sound clinical work fails as evidence.

The pathway closes that gap from both ends: for the clinicians who write psychiatric evidence, and for the lawyers, prosecutors and judges who have to read it, test it and rely on it.

The method is deliberately unglamorous — defined questions, documented reasoning, traceable sources, and conclusions stated at the confidence the evidence supports. That structure is what makes an opinion admissible, and what protects the clinician who signed it.

Who it is for

CLINICAL TRACK

Clinicians who write the evidence

- Psychiatrists receiving legal referrals
- Psychologists in court-directed assessment
- Trainees building forensic competence early
- Mental health professionals contributing to legal proceedings

LEGAL TRACK

Professionals who read and test it

- Lawyers instructing and challenging experts
- Prosecutors and members of the judiciary
- Legal advisers in institutions and ministries
- Anyone who must decide what a psychiatric report is worth

Taught with English law as the reference framework, and adapted to the law of the country where each cohort practises.

Four ways in. Start wherever you need to.

Each format stands on its own. There are no prerequisites and no fixed order — take one masterclass, several across a theme, a workshop series, or a complete programme. Choose what matches the gap you actually have.

Masterclass

A single session · 3–6 hours

14 masterclasses across 3 themes · page 4

One question a court asks, and the reasoning behind a defensible answer.

Choose it if you have one specific gap — capacity, risk, malingering — and want it closed quickly.

Workshop series

4–6 sessions · 10–14 hours

Flagship · page 6

A full practical skill built around one simulated case, with work produced between sessions and reviewed in the next.

Choose it if you want to be able to do something, not just understand it — such as writing a complete report.

Programme

3 months · blended

Page 7

Structured competence across the field — assessment, formulation, report writing and giving evidence — with supervised case work.

Choose it if you are moving seriously into medico-legal practice and want the whole foundation at once.

Certification

12 months

Page 7

Assessed, documented competence: advanced assessment, civil and criminal practice, expert evidence and supervised casework.

Choose it if you want a formal, assessed record of specialist competence.

Live and interactive

Taught online in real time — questions, cases and discussion, not recorded lectures.

English and Arabic

Each written natively in its language, not translated from the other.

Taught by the founder

Every session, by a UK-trained Consultant Forensic Psychiatrist still in practice.

Everything learned in one format carries into the others: a masterclass taken now counts as part of a programme later.

Fourteen masterclasses, three themes

Each masterclass takes one question a court asks and teaches the reasoning behind a defensible answer — in a single session of 3–6 hours. Take one on its own, or several across a theme.

THEME 1 · THE CIVIL AND MEDICO-LEGAL INTERFACE

7 masterclasses, outside the criminal courts

Capacity and Consent in Clinical and Legal Contexts

Decision-specific capacity, and the legal standards that apply across clinical, legal and institutional settings.

Financial Capacity Assessment

Managing money, testamentary capacity, vulnerability to financial abuse, and the legal frameworks that govern them.

Psychiatric Harm in Personal Injury

Causation, foreseeability, prognosis, and the legal standards for psychiatric injury claims.

Family Court Psychiatric Assessment

Parental capacity, custody, child welfare, and what family courts need from psychiatric evidence.

Employment Tribunals and Psychiatric Evidence

Workplace stress, occupational injury, disability discrimination, and the psychiatrist's role.

Medical Negligence and Psychiatric Practice

Standard of care, breach and causation — and the psychiatrist as both defendant and expert.

Immigration and Asylum Mental Health Assessment

Trauma-informed evaluation and the evidential standards these proceedings apply.

THEME 2 · THE CRIMINAL-JUSTICE INTERFACE

4 masterclasses in forensic practice

Criminal Responsibility

Awareness of the act, of its wrongfulness, and capacity for self-control — and how different legal systems frame the test.

Risk Assessment and Risk Management

Structured professional judgement, risk formulation, and communicating risk defensibly in a report.

Malingering and Deception Detection

Clinical and forensic assessment, structured indicators, and defensible documentation.

Mental Health Legislation in Practice

Detention and treatment frameworks, tribunals and civil commitment across jurisdictions.

Not sure which to take?

Start with the question you were last asked and could not answer with confidence. That is your first masterclass.

THEME 3 · COMPLEX PRESENTATIONS

3 masterclasses on the clinical conditions that complicate standard medico-legal reasoning. Taken together, they form a specialist track for senior clinicians and those moving towards independent expert practice.

Drug and Alcohol Use at the Medico-Legal Interface

Intoxication, withdrawal, substance-induced psychosis, and what they mean for criminal responsibility.

Developmental Disorders and Learning Disability

Autism, intellectual disability and ADHD: capacity, responsibility, and vulnerable defendants and witnesses.

Cognitive Impairment at the Medico-Legal Interface

Dementia and cognitive decline: testamentary, financial and driving capacity, and criminal responsibility.

WHAT EVERY MASTERCLASS INCLUDES

The same standard, in every session

A real legal question

Each session starts from what a court or tribunal actually asks, not from a textbook chapter.

Worked cases

Simulated case material, reasoned through step by step, with the points where reports usually fail made explicit.

Material to keep

A structured summary, a checklist for the report section concerned, and key references.

Both sides of the table

Clinical and legal participants are taught what the other side needs — which is usually where the case turns.

Writing Psychiatric Evidence

A structured programme in medico-legal report writing.

Eight modules across two live teaching days, separated by a two-week practical assignment. You leave having written a complete psychiatric medico-legal report.

Most report-writing training is generic. This programme teaches the whole process that produces a defensible opinion — from clarifying the referral to forming the opinion, writing the report and making recommendations — using the reasoning of real forensic practice.

- One case, start to finish. A single simulated case file, MLC-100 — The Train Fire Case — with eight professionally developed documents.
- Everything you need. Report-writing checklist, pre-course reading, session summaries, assignments, self-assessment tools and a model report.
- English and Arabic, each written natively.

Clinical track

Answer the legal question as a clinician: what the court is asking, what the evidence supports, how to write it so it survives challenge, and how to give it in the witness box.

Legal track

Read a psychiatric report critically: what a sound opinion looks like, where reports fail, how to instruct an expert well, and how to test the evidence.

Expert Witness and Court Skills

COMING SOON

Preparing, presenting and holding your opinion under cross-examination — with a structured mock cross-examination.

Forensic Assessment Methodology

COMING SOON

Document review, forensic history, mental state and risk formulation — linking clinical findings to the legal question.

Programme

3 months · blended

The structured route into serious medico-legal competence, combining live sessions, independent study and supervised case work.

- Month 1 — legal frameworks and core masterclasses, across jurisdictions
- Month 2 — assessment methodology and complex presentations
- Month 3 — report writing and giving evidence
- Throughout — supervised case work, peer learning and individual feedback

COMING SOON

Certification

12 months

Advanced Certification in Medico-Legal and Forensic Psychiatry, for practitioners who want assessed, documented competence at specialist level.

- Advanced forensic assessment
- Civil and criminal forensic psychiatry
- Expert evidence, ethics and professionalism
- Supervised casework and a portfolio of practice

WHO TEACHES IT

Dr Ahmed Abouelghit

UK-trained Consultant Forensic Psychiatrist · Founder, MedLex

His practice spans forensic psychiatry, medico-legal reporting, Mental Health Tribunals, court and Parole Board work, across the United Kingdom, Egypt and Qatar. He designed and delivered training for public prosecutors in Egypt in partnership with UNICEF Egypt.

Every session on this pathway is written and taught by him — built from the situations he has faced in the witness box, not assembled from a distance.

“We're not just training psychiatrists — we're building the professional standard where clinical expertise becomes court-admissible evidence.”
